

ABSTRACT

A simple and effective pre-processing step to reduce the complexity of solving p -cycle network design problems involving pre-selecting candidate cycles based on their topological score (TS) and a priori efficiency (AE) is disclosed. The disclosure contains a case study that examines joint optimization of working routes with placement of p -cycles.